THE BIG EASY, STEEL CITY ADOPT PERMEABLE PAVEMENTS

An ordinance passed by the City of New Orleans in September requires all new non-residential parking spaces to be paved using permeable pavements, including porous asphalt. The new requirement is part of a broader effort to reduce the volume of storm water that enters the city's drainage system. Over the past six years, the city has invested more than $120 million in green infrastructure projects, including permeable pavements, according to The Times-Picayune. And further, Allegheny County in Pennsylvania is planning to utilize permeable pavements in Section 10 of its new Clean Water Plan. The plan identifies thousands of potential permeable pavement project locations in the greater Pittsburgh area. National Asphalt Pavement Association offers several publications on the design and construction of porous asphalt pavements, and the online pavement design tool PaveXpress includes a module for structural design of porous asphalt pavements.
