FORMALDEHYDE RULE DEADLINE EXTENDED

Updating Emissions Standards for formaldehyde emitted from wood products has been ongoing since Obama-era rule setting. With court involvement, Emissions Standards for formaldehyde from wood products are still not finalized. Under a 2016 rule, wood product manufacturers were expected to comply with new emissions limits by December 2017, but deadlines were extended. Given that the issue is not resolved, there are now concerns about supply-chain disruptions.

The new deadline for enforcing the Emissions Standard is June 1, 2018.
